MRS. STOKES USES DIARY FOR AN ALIBI

Gives Details of Dr. Billig's Exit From Her Home New Year's Eve 1918.

Witness Declares Stokes Said He Had Heard Visitor Wasn't Her Cousin.

NURSE IS CONTRADICTED

Incidents Recalled From Notebook to Show Falsity of Accusations.

Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, on the witness stand again yesterday in her own behalf before Supreme Court Justice Finch, gave her version of the incident of New Year's eve, 1918-19, and declared to be false testimony given by witnesses for her husband, W. E. D. Stokes, regarding the presence in and near her bedroom of Dr. Hal Billig, a relative who is a correspondent in Stokes's action for divorce.

Mrs. Stokes testified that Billig wired of his expected arrival on December 30; she told Mr. Stokes about it and he sent two men with a couch, which was placed in a passageway between Mrs. Stokes's bedroom and a library on the third floor of their home, then in West Seventy-eighth street. Mr. Stokes first got the assurances of his son "Weddie" that he would not object to company in the room, as "Weddie" already had arranged to sleep there, she testified. She said she asked Mr. Stokes to have the couch put in the library proper, and he said he would "arrange it," but never did.

Mr. Stokes received the guest "nicely," she said, and invited him to his club for luncheon next day. But that night, as she and Dr. Billig returned from celebrating the new year at a theatre, she testified, Mr. Stokes met them on the second floor stair landing and asked to speak with her alone.

Heard He Was Not a Cousin.

"I've just heard Billig is not your cousin," she said her husband declared, and there followed a "tirade" that she could not quite comprehend, though she explained carefully Billig's relationship. Billig, heard some of it, she said, and Mr. Stokes told him: "Young man, you sleep upstairs. My wife is to have her bedroom to herself."

An attendant then asked Mr. Stokes if he was ready to go to bed and he replied: "No, I'm going to sit up all night."

"Not on account of me," she said Dr. Billig interposed, as he picked up his hat and coat and left. "He was in the house not more than ten minutes, and all that time I had on my evening dress," Mrs. Stokes added. She testified that later the door of a passageway

PHYLLIS ONLY 4, BUT SAILS WITH GROWNUP PASSPORT

Departs Alone To-day to Visit Grandparents, but Every Passenger in the Saxonia Will Contest for Privilege of Chaperoning Child.

Phyllis Ruth Toque, who carries a full size passport even if she is only four and almost a quarter years old, is the passenger who will command most attention to-day when the liner Saxonia blows a stern warning to river craft and backs out into the Hudson. For Phyllis, daughter of F. A. C. Toque of Louisville, Ky., will leave her daddy on the pier and bravely cross the broad Atlantic all alone in company with many grownups and children she never saw before to-day.

The little girl is bound for a visit to her grandfather, Capt. C. E. Toque, R. N. R., and her grandmother. Her father cannot leave his business long enough to make the trip across, although he came to New York to make sure she started safely. Her mother died when she was a year old.

The Saxonia's trip promises to be a stormy one, for last night the ship's complement was arguing warmly concerning just who is to take care of the little girl on board. Everybody from the midshipmen to the crew of the captain's ship claimed the privilege. When the passengers arrive an augmentation of the row is expected. Phyllis, however, says she's travelling alone, and her steamship ticket and passport say so, too.

Her recurring illnesses at this time, she testified, led her to ask Mr. Stokes not to bring in parties of men and women for her to entertain. This led to quarrels, and one night she fainted, she said. Her condition required special dishes, she declared, and when a servant served her one in the apartment Mr. Stokes discharged him and she was left without anything to eat until the next afternoon, when her friend, Mrs. Hendricks, went out and got something for her.

The trial will be continued to-day.

WED IN CAVE AGE STYLE, SHE GETS ANNULMENT

School Teacher Afraid, She Says, to Call for Help.

Mrs. Marie Esposito Impellitteri, a school teacher living at 177 Rockaway avenue, Brooklyn, who alleged that Paul Impellitteri of West New York, N. J., wooed her in cave man style and married her when she was in fear of her life, obtained from Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn yesterday an annulment of the marriage.

The teacher alleged that Impellitteri, who had been in the navy, induced her to go to his uncle's home in Warren street, Brooklyn, and refused to allow her to go home. The next morning she was bundled into a cab, taken to a jewelry store, where a ring was purchased, and then to the Municipal Building in Manhattan, where the marriage took place August 4, 1920. She testified she was afraid to make any outcry.

The New York Bible Society's house in 5 East Forty-eighth street, the gift of Dr. James Talcott, was dedicated last night with impressive ceremonies in which Bishop-elect William T. Manning of the New York Diocese of the Episcopal Church took a prominent part. A previous service had been held at the Church of St. Nicholas, Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street.

The prayer was offered by Dr. Manning, and messages were read from John Warburton, Otto T. Barnard, Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, and Gov. Nathan L. Miller. The invocation was delivered by the Rev. James Malcolm MacCloud.

Visited by Her Father.

Mrs. Stokes's diary referred to a visit from her father. He stopped at another hotel than the Ansonia, where the Stokeses were living. "Mr. Stokes never treated me right, and my father came every once in a while to talk to me and help me adjust my own business in the affairs," she explained. The notebook mentioned occasional shopping trips in company with a Mrs. Hendricks or a Mrs. Van Arden or a Mrs. Kearney, "but I seldom bought anything because Mr. Stokes would not give me money for baby clothes," Mrs. Stokes testified.

Her recurring illnesses at this time, she testified, led her to ask Mr. Stokes not to bring in parties of men and women for her to entertain. This led to quarrels, and one night she fainted, she said. Her condition required special dishes, she declared, and when a servant served her one in the apartment Mr. Stokes discharged him and she was left without anything to eat until the next afternoon, when her friend, Mrs. Hendricks, went out and got something for her.

GRENADATE EXPLODES IN PUBLIC SCHOOL

Atlantic City Boy Pulls Firing Pin and Probably Will Lose a Hand.

PANIC IS SOON QUIETED

Sham Battle on Beach Left Deadly Weapons for Pupils to Play With.

ATLANTIC CITY, April 25.—A hand grenade loaded with TNT, one of several picked up on the beach near here where they had been left by soldiers from Camp Dix, exploded this afternoon in the Massachusetts Avenue Public School when one of the boys pulled the firing pin. The fragments of the grenade casing shattered the hand of Charles Flett, 13 years old, and cut several other children sitting near him. Others were burned by the gases and the burning explosive. Young Flett was taken to the City Hospital, where he was said to be in a serious condition. The noise of the explosion was heard throughout the school building and caused a panic among the pupils, but they were quickly quieted when teachers went among them and explained what had happened. Charles R. Boyer, Supervising Principal of the City Schools, at once sent word to Mayor Bader and other members of the School Board, and a warning was sent out to every school in the city to be on the watch for other grenades that might have been picked up by the children. The children of each school were assembled and asked to turn in all of them that they had found, and several were discovered.

The soldiers gave a demonstration of modern warfare on the beach near New Jersey avenue several days ago, and the police here say that they failed to clean up after their performance, leaving several grenades on the sand. The children went there to play after school and picked them up. Flett was playing with the grenade when he pulled the firing pin.

14 HELD AFTER DEATH OF WEDDING GUEST
Free-for-All Fight of Gangs, Police Theory.

Charges of suspicion of homicide were made against fourteen men in the Gates Avenue Court yesterday in connection with the killing of one guest and the injuring of another early yesterday at the wedding party of Frederick (Facky) Black and Mrs. Teresa Broderick Black at 166 Washington Park, Brooklyn. None of the prisoners, among whom were Facky and his father, Patrick Black, would assist in the investigation, the police said. The theory that rival gangs chose the wedding supper as the occasion for a free for all fight is held by the police.

The body of the man who was found dead in the dining room of the Black flat was identified as that of John Brennan, a driver, of 479 Pacific street, Brooklyn. The identification was made possible with the aid of finger prints and his father and sister were notified. They could give the police no useful information.

According to the detectives of the Classon avenue police station Thomas Teneasberne, 24, of 17 Synamore street, who is dying in Cumberland Street Hospital, was the object of the principal attack.

Medals conferred by the State will be presented this evening to 500 members of the Police Department who served in the war. The presentation will take place in the gymnasium at Police Headquarters.

LEAGUE FORMED TO FIGHT BLUE LAWS

400 Men and Women Launch Move at Banquet in the Hotel Commodore.

BRYAN'S VIEWS LEND AID

Gov. Edwards, Miss Marbury and Judge Haskell Among the Speakers.

As a result of a banquet in the Hotel Commodore last evening to crystallize opposition to the blue laws movement, the 400 men and women present organized themselves into an American People's League "whose policy it shall be to contest vigorously the issues raised by those groups of citizens who seek to deprive the people of their individual rights and privileges."

It was further resolved that Frederick Lawrence of this city, who has been active in the movement culminating in the meeting last night, be requested to confer with and enlist in the cause "public men of recognized ability, in whom the people of America have full confidence and whose leadership the people will not hesitate to follow."

Herman A. Metz presided as toastmaster, and the speakers included Gov. Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, County Judge Reuben L. Haskell of Brooklyn, Comptroller Charles L. Craig, Theron Akin, Mayor of Amsterdam, N. Y.; Renaud Wolf, Miss Ellizabeth Marbury and Representative Marguerite L. Smith of the State Assembly.

Mr. Metz said he had discussed prohibition with William Jennings Bryan last Saturday, and he quoted Mr. Bryan as saying he had "never expected to see the radical form its enforcement had taken."

Judge Haskell said the people do not yet realize that in putting out of business the breweries and distilleries the prohibitionists are substituting the selfish interests of monopolistic chains of drug stores, with their own distilleries yet to come.

Miss Marbury decried the idea that we must have laws to make us particularly clean and decent on Sundays. She evoked peals of laughter when she said: "When I was a youngster, one of a large family, we used to be all lined up for a scrubbing on Saturday nights to make us presentable for Sunday. Those of you who have children don't do that any longer. The children are washed every day in the week. Don't let us go back to those early, narrow-minded days."

"A baby citizenry," said Gov. Edwards, "is the natural result of a national guardianship; it is more than one step from the nursery to the Presidency. It is a trite but true saying that one who would rule others should first learn to rule himself. Self discipline, not national guardianship, is the architect of character."

Telegrams or letters expressing sympathy with the purpose of the meeting were read from Samuel Gompers, United States Senators Wadsworth, Follinhuysen and Shortridge, Representatives Julius Kahn and Ogden L. Mills, David Belasco, Mayors C. F. Hettrick of Asbury Park and William G. Taylor of Wilmington, Del., and many others.

Medals conferred by the State will be presented this evening to 500 members of the Police Department who served in the war. The presentation will take place in the gymnasium at Police Headquarters.
